He has received a singular vindication at the hands of both parties There is not, perhaps, a newspaper in the United States, certainly not a Demo-cratic one, which has not had occasion ome time or other to revise its estimatof the man. Those uewspapers, includ-ing The Eagle, which denounced him as a tyraut for his rulings in the House of Representatives were perfectly willing to admit that after all he was not "a bad sort" when the Democrats were compelled to follow his example. We know of nothing more humorous in the field of politics than the reluctance of ad to do it, and it would have been better for them if they had accepted with good grace the precedent which Mr. REED established. It is to be regretted that the leader of the minority in the House has recently permitted his ambition to run away with his judgment and that he has joined the "scholar in politics" in advocating discriminating legslation against countries which will not buy American silver. It is hardly pleasant to realize that he has shown a disposition to use the sliver issue as a Presidential stalking horse, and the fact that more than one of the New England states has straddled the question of honest money does not excuse or palitate his coudnet in the least. Leaving aside this hinnder (a hiunder, though, which ought to be irreparable) there is nothing in the Maine Congressman's record of which he need feel ashamed. He is an aggressive partisan, but he is also one of the ahiest statesmen of his day, and, taking his career in the large sense, it is one of which any American citizen might be prond. Emphatically it is true that we do not want him to be President, but we would like to see the Maine Republi-cans return him until his hair turus gray, and until he has outlived the
